

The Asahi Shimbun Company draws on news-gathering and reporting networks in Japan and overseas. We operate more than 270 offices, including 34 overseas bureaus.

Alliances with Overseas Media

The Asahi Shimbun has forged alliances with The New York Times (U.S.) and the Dong-A Ilbo (South Korea). The Tokyo bureaus of both papers are located within the Asahi Shimbun's Tokyo head office, and our paper's New York and Seoul bureaus are located in the head offices of our partners. Popular columns and features appearing in The New York Times run in both the print and digital editions of the Asahi Shimbun. In 2015, in partnership with Shueisha Inc., we began publishing T JAPAN: The New York Times Style Magazine, the Japan edition of The New York Times' free premium magazine.

The Japan edition of The HuffPost, a news and blog opinion site from the U.S., was established in 2013. Today, the Asahi Shimbun Company collaborates with The HuffPost as a partner company. The HuffPost introduces diverse viewpoints from Japan and overseas with an emphasis on the social media uniting people around the world.

Participation in the UN Global Compact

The UN Global Compact is an association of companies and groups that have pledged to uphold and act on the basis of ten principles established based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other sources in the four areas of human rights, labor, the environment, and anti-corruption.

The Asahi Shimbun Company began participating in 2004, the first Japanese media company to do so, and is actively involved in the Global Compact Network Japan (GCNJ), the Compact's domestic body. And we are a founding member of the SDG Media Compact. We are committed to fulfilling both our responsibilities as a media institution and our social responsibilities as a corporate citizen.
